

Marin Balluk History

The Marin Balluk were the people of the area west of Maribyrnong on eve of white settlement, occupying land extending to Kororoit Creek to west and Sunbury to the north. They were part of the Wurunjeri people, members of the Kulin nations.

The Aboriginal people of the area knew their country well. They knew the patten of the seasons, the times of plenty and the times of scarcity. They knew that the river frequently folded and knew the value of fire.

Like the Marin Balluk people, we at St Paul's want to respect our land, our culture and our heritage, and learn from those who have come before us.
